THE COLD WATER MAN.

It was an honest fisherman,
I knew him passing well,
And he lived by a little pond,
Within a little dell.

To charm the fish he never spoke,
Although his voice was fine ;
He found the most convenient way
Was just to drop a line.

And many a gudgeon of the pond,
If they could speak to-day,
Would own with grief this angler had
A mighty taking way.

Alas! one day this fisherman
Had taken too much grog,
And being but a landsman, too,
He couldn't keep the log.

'Twas all in vain with might and main
He strove to reach the shore ;
Down, down he went to feed the fish -
He'd baited oft before.

The jury gave the verdict that
'Twas nothing else but gin
Had caused the fisherman to be
So sadly taken in ;

Though one stood out upon a whim,
And said the angler's slaughter,
To be exact about the fact,
Was clearly gin and water.

The moral of this mournful tale
To all is plain and clear—
That drinkers' habits brings a man
Too often to his bier,

And he who scorns to take the pledge
And keep the promise fast,
May be in spite of fate a stiff
Cold water man at last.

The first day Artemus Ward entered Toledo, travel-worn and seedy, he said to an elder who was on the street, "Mister, where could I get a square meal for twenty-five cents?" He was told. "I say, mister," said he. "where could I get the twenty-five cents?"

"Patrick, where's the whiskey I gave you to clean the windows with?" "Och, master, I just drank it; and I thought if I breathed on the glass it, would be all the same."

It is better to yield a little than to quarrel a great deal. The habit of standing up, as people call it, for their (little) rights, is one of the most disagreeable and undignified things. Life is too short for the perpetual bickering which attends such a disposition; and unless a very momentous affair, indeed, where other people's claims and interests are involved, is it not wiser and more dignified to yield somewhat of our precious rights, than squabble to maintain them?

STAND FROM UNDER.

Many of the smaller articles of findings you can receive by mail to advantage if you are in the interior States or Territories. SAMSON AND THE JAW-BONE.—To illustrate how curiously persons sometimes try to explain matters that are a hard task for our credulity, I mention a little incident experienced by the writer of these lines. When I traveled, in 1871, in Palestine, an old gray friar from the monastery of Ramieh, about fifty miles west from Jerusalem, showed me the supposed place where Samson killed 1,000 Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass. When I expressed my doubts as to the length and strength of a jaw-bone, considering the great number of surrounding enemies, the good monk explained the case in the following manner: "Well, he took hold of the ass by the tail and swung the animal against the Philistines in such a manner that only his head, and of this especially the jaw-bone, struck the Philistines, keeping off in this way the surrounding warriors, and giving the blow the necessary force to kill." I affirm that in this manner Samson could have slain a million Philistines, provided the tail of the ass did not break.—Sacramento Journal.

TIGHT BOOTS.

I would like to kno who the man waz who fust invented tight boots.

He must hav bin a narrow and kontracted kuss. If he still lives I hope he haz repented ov his sin, or iz enjoying grate agony ov sum kind.

Enny man who kan wear a pair of tight boots and be humble and penitent and not swear will mak a good husband.

Mi feet are az uneasy az a dog's nose the fust time he wears a new muzzle.

I think mi feet will eventually choke the boots to deth. I liv in hopes they will.

Avoid tight boots my friend az you would the grip of the devil, as many a man learns to swear by encouraging hiz feet to hurt hiz boots.

I am too old and too respectable to be a phool enny more. Tite boots are an insult to enny man's understanding. He who wears tite boots will hav to acknowledge the corn. Tite boots hav no bowels ov mersy, their insides are wrath and promiskious cussin.

Beware ov tite boots.

WIT.—“There is no more interesting spectacle than to see the effect of wit upon the different characters of men; than to observe it expanding caution, relaxing dignity, unfreezing coldness, teaching age, and care, and pain to smile, extorting reluctant gleams of pleasure from melancholy, and charming even the pangs of grief. It is pleasant to observe how it penetrates through the coldness and awkwardness of society, gradually bringing men nearer together, and like the combined force of wine and oil, giving every man a glad heart and a shining countenance. Genuine and innocent wit like this is surely the flavor of the mind! Man could direct his ways by plain reason, and support his life by tasteless food; but God has given us wit and flavor, and brightness, and laughter, and perfumes, to enliven the days of man's pilgrimage, and to ‘charm’ his pained steps over the burning marl.”—Sydney Smith.

A paper encourages the young by the example of a "youth who formerly lived in a hovel; yet with only his two hands and a crow-bar opened a jewelry store; and now he lives in a large stone residence in Sing Sing."

A smart young man, so fresh that his parents think of having him rubbed down with rock salt, attempted to run the elevator at an uptown hotel the other day while the operator was flirting around the corridor with a red-headed house maid. He pulled the rope and up started the car, and the smart young man looked out and shouted to the bell boys: "How's this?" Just as he shouted the back of his head came in violent contact with the woodwork of the second-floor landing, and he bit his tongue and saw fireworks simultaneously. The elevator was stopped, and they took him out. He had claret on his lips, and a patented carbuncle on the back of his head. "Fellows," said he, making a violent effort to smile, "fellows, do any of you know anything new in profanity?"

A man stepped on a piece of banana peel on Main street this morning, and promptly sat down on a pint bottle of yeast in his coat pocket. He rose immediately.—Bridgeport Standard.

ON HORNS.

Horns varys in length, but from three tu six inches iz the favorite size.

It is different from other horns being ov a fluid natur. It iz really more pugnashus than the ram's horn ; six inches ov it will knock a man perfekly calm. When it knocks a man down it holds him there. It has drawn more tears, broken more hearts and blited more hopes than all the other agencys ov the devil ; what kind ov pizen will you take stranger ?

The man who is only honest because he thinks honesty is the best policy, is not really an honest man. Honesty is not swerving policy, but stable principle. An honest man is honest from his inmost soul, nor deigns to stoop to aught that is mean, though great results hang on the petty fraud. •

HER SANGUINE TEMPERAMENT.

The other evening the police were informed that a resident of Lafayette street East was killing his wife. This is not an unusual thing for a husband to do, during these days of pull-backs, tie-backs, get-backs, back-ups, and long trails, but still the policeman made a rush for the house. As he reached the steps the wife had just finished washing her bloody nose, and she greeted him with the cheerful query :

"Hello! Did you hear of the racket?"

"I heard that you were being murdered," he replied.

"Oh! pshaw! It was merely a lively little set-to between the old man and myself. We have lots of 'em. I don't always come out second best, as I did this time, but it's all right."

"If a body meet a body
Comin' through the rye!"

"I should think it would be awful to live this way," remarked the officer, as he glanced at the many proofs of poverty.

"Oh, go 'long," she smiled; "we can't all be dukes and dukesses, and there's no use trying. I've got six children around the house, and it's my duty to carry a lively heart. Fact is, I'm of a sanguine temperament, and I always look on the bright side anyhow."

"Weren't you set out of a house on Croghan street for non-payment of rent?" the officer asked, looking at her more closely.

"Same woman—same family—same family," she laughed; "I had more fun over that than you could carry on a freight train. Three of the children were sick, the old man out of work, the dog lost, the cat under the weather with the cramps, and none of us knew what to do. However,

'The sun may be shining to-morrow,
Although it is cloudy to-day;"

and I sat down on the old cook stove and laughed till I cried."

"I think I saw you at the poormaster's office," he observed.

"And that was another good joke on Snyder," she grinned. "Yes, I went around there and asked for Mocha coffee, granulated sugar, seedless raisins, Worcestershire sauce, pastry flour, and A 1 coal, and you ought to see the old man go down in his boots. I got some taters, and meat and wood, and some of the old folks were put out to hear me singing—

'The wolf of starvation, she winked at me—by-by—tra-la!
But I married a duke with a fortune three—fe—fo—fum!"

"Well, I guess you'll get along," said the officer, as he went down the steps.

"Don't you bet I won't!" she replied, standing in the door. "We haven't a stick of wood, and nothing to eat but a loaf of bread, while the rent is two months overdue, but I am of a sanguine temperament, you know. If we don't strike a streak of luck to-night we'll have a dry old meal and another fight in the morning, but luck has got to come some day. Destiny is destiny, and this old calico dress has got to do me till snow flies, but—

'There's many a hard up fam-i-lee—there's many who want for bread;
But I'm a sandy, sanguine, cheerful wife; who'll never give up till dead.'

"If you hear a tussel in here this evening don't interfere. I've got a handful of snuff all ready for the old man's eyes, and it'll nearly kill me to see him fooling around for a club with one hand and digging his eyes with the other. Well, tra-la."—Detroit Free Press.

"Pat, buy a trunk to put your clothes in," said his Yankee companion. "What! and go naked this cold weather?" asked the honest spalpeen of Killarney.

Jones told Brown that he could always get away from home of an evening by telling his wife that the noise of her sewing machine made him nervous, and that nothing composed him so well as a long rattling walk; but when Brown tried this dodge on his wife she kicked his hat under the sofa and said, "You can't play any of Bill Jones' tricks on me, and this Light Running 'Domestic' doesn't make any noise, either. I ain't permanently insane if I did marry you." Brown didn't go out that night, but he would have given a week's salary to have been somewhere else when she found out that he had lighted his cigar with her 'Domestic' paper fashion for a winter dolman.

During the strike in Albany, while Coroner Fitzhenry, of that city, who is a member of the Burgesses Corps, was guarding the western end of the upper railroad bridge, a man attempted to pass the guard. The coroner commanded the intruder to halt. "Who will stop me from going over this bridge?" asked the man. "I will," said the coroner. "Would you stop the likes of me, who voted for you for coroner?" The coroner replied, "I am put here to shoot, and I get thirty dollars for a corpse. If you don't leave I'll put a bullet through you."

An angry letter never accomplishes the desired end, and an insolent one harms none but the writer. This is true of all correspondence, but more especially when applied to communications of a business nature. In this department the true gentleman is easily recognized, and with him, above all others, it is gratifying to deal. His demands, which if couched in other language would be rejected, are often complied with, and, whatever the business, there is satisfaction in performing it.

HOW THEY WALTZ IN PUT-IN-BAY.

People may say that a waltz is a waltz, but it is a mistake; as much as to say that a dog is a dog; for there are dogs and dogs, and there are waltzes and waltzes. With one person it is the poetry of motion; with another it is about as awkward a performance as putting yourself upon a level and going through the motion of running up stairs would be. A Kentucky girl is a natural waltzer, and she does it with a charming chic and abandon. An Ohio girl's waltzing is easy, graceful and "melodious." If she happens to come from Cincinnati and across the Rhine, she swings dreamily round and round in the endless "Dutch waltz." If she comes from Chicago, she throws her hair back, jumps up and cracks her heels together, and carries off her astonished partner as though a simoon had struck him, and knocks over all intervening obstacles in her mad career around the room. If she is from Indiana, she creeps closely and timidly up to her partner as though she would like to get into his vest pocket, and melts away with ecstasy as the witching strains of the "Blue Danube" sweep through the hall. If she is from Missouri, she crooks her body in the middle like a door hinge, takes her partner by the shoulders and makes him miserable in trying to hop around her without treading on her No. 9 shoes. If she comes from Michigan, she astonishes her partner by now and then working in a touch of the double-shuffle, or a bit of pigeon-wing, with the waltz step; and if she comes from Arkansas, she throws both arms around his neck, rolls up her eyes as she floats away, and is heard to murmur, "Oh, hug me, John!"

PADDY SHANNON.

Paddy Shannon was a bugler in the Eighty-seventh Regiment—the Faugh-a-Ballaghs—and, with that regiment under the command of Sir Hugh Gough, served all through the Peninsular campaign. When the campaign was over, Paddy had nothing left him but the recollections of it. His only solace was the notice taken of him in the canteen. It is no wonder, then, he became a convivial soul. From the bottle he soon found his way to the halberts.

The regiment was paraded, and the proceedings read, and Paddy tied up. The signal was given for the drummers to begin, when Paddy Shannon exclaimed: “Listen, now, Sir Hugh. Do you mean to say you are going to flog me? Just recollect who it was sounded the charge at Borossa, when you took the only French eagle ever taken. Wasn’t it Paddy Shannon? Little I thought that day it would come to this; and the regiment so proud of that same eagle on the colors.” “Take him down,” said Sir Hugh, and Paddy escaped unpunished. A very short time, however, elapsed before Paddy again found himself placed in similar circumstances. “Go on,” said the Colonel. “Don’t be in a hurry,” ejaculated Paddy. “I’ve a few words to say, Sir Hugh.” “The eagle won’t save you this time, Sir.” “Is it the eagle, indeed! then I wasn’t going to say any thing about that same, though you are, and ought to be proud of it. But I was just going to ask if it wasn’t Paddy Shannon who, when the breach of Tarifa was stormed by 22,000 French, and only the Eighty-seventh to defend it, if it wasn’t Paddy Shannon who struck up, ‘Garryowen, to glory, boys,’ and you, Sir Hugh, have got the same two towers, and the breach between them, upon your coat of arms in testimony thereof.” “Take him down,” said the Colonel, and Paddy was again unscathed.

Paddy, however, had a long list of services to get through, and a good deal of whiskey, and ere another two months he was again tied up, the sentence read, and an assurance from Sir Hugh Gough that nothing would make him relent. Paddy tried the eagle; it was of no use. He appealed to Sir Hugh’s pride and the breach of Tarifa without any avail. “And is it me,” at last he broke out, “that you are going to flog? I ask you, Sir Hugh Gough, before the whole regiment, who know it well, if it wasn’t Paddy Shannon who picked up the French Field Marshal’s staff at the battle of Vittoria, that the Duke of Wellington sent to the Prince Regent, and for which he got that letter that will be long remembered, and that made him a Field-Marshal into the bargain? The Prince Regent said: ‘You’ve sent me the staff of a Field-Marshal of France; I return you that of a Field-Marshal of England.’ Wasn’t it Paddy Shannon that took it? Paddy Shannon, who never got rap, or recompense, or ribbon, or star, or coat-of-arms, or mark of distinction, except the flogging you are going to give him?” “Take him down,” cried Sir Hugh, and again Paddy was forgiven.

HOW TO PICK A WATERMELON.—Some time late in August when the moon is up and the clock has struck twelve, midnight, get up and dress, without any noise, go out the back way and turn to the right, after going a half mile go to the left, over a fence, and you will see the melon patch. Pick out a dark colored one, with the skin a little rough, shoulder the melon and step out briskly; once and a while look over your shoulder to see if the moon is all right. When you are home bury the melon in the hay mow, and slip into bed. This is an old fashioned way to pick melons, and the way your father and grandfather picked them. After you get the melon tear up the receipt. One melon during your life is enough to pick in this way.

Mr. Collins, of Hartford, bought him a dog—a large bloodthirsty bulldog. He said he wanted a dog that would stand by his wife when he was away. He was away the next night, and came home late, drunk as usual, when his new dog met him at the door. The dog looked at him as much as to say, "Go back where you got your whisky." Mr. Collins argued with the dog, asking him who was bossing the house. The dog took a mouthful out of Mr. Collins, right where he didn't want it taken out, and the owner of the dog is now troubled about sitting down. He wants to sell a good dog.

An Irish paper published the following item: "A deaf man named Taff was run down by a passenger train, and killed, on Wednesday morning. He was injured in a similar way about a year ago."

Turner, the painter, was at a dinner where several artists, amateurs, and literary men were convened. A poet, by way of being facetious, proposed as a toast, "The painters and glaziers of England." The toast was drunk; and Turner, after returning thanks for it, proposed, "Success to the paper-stainers," and called on the poet to respond.

HE WAS MISTAKEN.

This morning a gentleman entered a shop on Fifth street, and asked the clerk, "What is the price of knit undershirts with breast pockets?" He added, "I travel a great deal and carry large amounts of money, and I think that idea of pockets an excellent one, and I am surprised that some one has not thought of it before." "Really sir," replied the clerk, "I think myself it would be a good plan, but I am sorry to say we have none, and I did not know there were any made."

"You did not?" said the customer. "Well that's singular. They are exhibited in your window, and caught my eye as I was passing." "You must be mistaken," said the clerk. "I know every article in the store."

"But I am not," persisted the gentleman. "Step around and see for yourself." The wondering shopkeeper did as requested. He stepped briskly to the front of the window, looked in, then looked at the gentleman, then coughed, and acted as though he had just felt a sudden pain in the stomach, and then rammed a handkerchief into his mouth, and stepped back behind the counter.

"Well," exclaimed the customer triumphantly, "ain't they there?" "Ye-yes," said the clerk, appearing as though he had a fish bone in his throat. "They are there sure enough. But, sir, those undershirts are not for men, and those pockets are — and at this point he dived under the counter and disappeared, while a young lady clerk, standing near, smothered a convulsive giggle in a cambric handkerchief and started off with a very red face on important business to the rear part of the store. A sudden light seemed to break in upon the stranger, and he departed hurriedly, muttering, "How in thunder could I tell? I ain't a married man, and can't be expected to know everything."

Nobody but a fool will spend his time trying to convince a fool.

Courage without discretion is a ram with horns on both ends, he will have more fights than he can well attend to.

Thoughtfulness for others, generosity, modesty and self-respect are the qualities which make a real gentleman or lady.

HE WAS A WAYFARER.

He was one of the most hard-up and broken-down individuals you ever saw.

An old bent-up chap, who looked as if he had been struck continually in the back and doubled up by a trip-hammer, and then instantly struck in the stomach and knocked back again by another. And the expression of misery which rested upon his venerable and dusty face would have melted the heart of a statue.

Therefore, when he dropped into a down-town restaurant, and leaned feebly against the cashier's desk, the proprietor beamed on him benignly.

"This is an eatin'-place?" said he, inquiringly.

"Yes," answered the proprietor, encouragingly.

"A place where you eat?" continued the old man, pathetically blowing his nose on a rusty coat sleeve.

"Yes."

"And I s'pose you keep everything?"

"Of course."

"Have waiters?"

"Certainly!"

"An' put clean white aprons on them every day?"

"Well," answered the proprietor, thoughtfully, "I can't say as I do change their aprons daily."

The venerable stranger sighed.

"I'm a pilgrim and a wayfarer," groaned he; "an' it won't be long afore I'll be ridin' in a hearse; but, young man, if you venerate gray hairs, jest listen to my advice. Allus put clean white aprons on your waiters daily."

The restaurant keeper appeared suitably impressed, and said he should think about it.

"That's right," said the wayfarer; "'heed to the words of your forefathers,' the Scripeter says. Now, young man, to look at me, you wouldn't think that I was worth a million."

"No."

"Or that I owned the Erie Railroad and the Cunard line?"

"No."

"Or that on Texas prairies I hev ten thousand cattle a-tearin' an' a-gambolin' around in their innocent freedom, with my monogram stamped onto their hind quarters?"

The astonished proprietor said that he would never for a moment have imagined such a thing.

"I see," sorrowfully muttered the aged millionaire; "you took me for a poet or a free-lunch fiend, didn't you?"

The man of meals at any hour said he suspected something of the sort.

"I knew so," said his visitor; "thus the world misjudges me. But let me whisper in your ear. I haven't the faintest idea what to do with my immense wealth, for I am alone in this world. So I've decided on a plan. I go into a restaurant, a nice place like this, an' I order a sumptuous meal—boned turkey, quail on toast, lobster salad, an' etcetra. When I finish I walk out. Now, if the young man what keeps it don't run after me, take me by the collar and demand my bill, but lets me go in peace, I come back in a few days in a gorruss ekipage, present that young man with a gold watch an' a set of diamond studs an' a silver-plated revolver. I take that young man, figgeratively speakin', to my buzum, an' treat him like an only son. I surround that young man with luxury, lavish thousands on him, let him go to the theater, or concert, or prayer meetin'. a funeral or any other place where he can enjoy himself, every night if he wishes to. I allow him two servants, a bath room with hot and cold water, and give him a new pair of suspenders every Christmas. An' finally, when I go to join the heavenly band, I leave him all my money. Do you see?"

"Do I see?" echoed the young man; "yes, I see too muchly. Just light out, old sport; that dodge won't work here."

"Sir," haughtily uttered the aged philanthropist, "what do you mean?"

"I mean," answered the other, "that you don't get no free meals here. Now climb out, old Peter Cooper, before I bounce you."

"How I was mistaken," groaned the owner of the Cunard line, moving away. "Young man, I thought I saw in you a righteous youth; but 'tis not so. Evil is marked in indelible ink upon your brow, and when you stand upon the gallows I won't move a finger to help you."

"Get out, will you?"

The philanthropist paused a moment, waved his umbrella impressively in the air, and then said, as he resumed his journey:

"Look in the morning papers, to-morrow. I owe a duty to society, and I shall perform it. The public, sir, shall know that you put dog's meat into your sausage, and cat's flesh into your hash. Beware, sir, beware!"

And before the proprietor of the place could reach a club and climb over the counter, he was gone.

THE GAME OF LIFE.

Man's life is a game of cards. First, it is "crib-ago," next he tries to "go it alone," at a sort of "cut, shuffle and deal" pace. Then he "gam-bols on the green." Then he "raises" the "deuce" when his mother "takes a hand in," and, contrary to Hoyle, "beats the little joker" with her "five." Then, with his "diamonds" he "wins" the "queen of hearts." Tired of "playing a lone hand," he expresses a desire to "assist" his fair "partner," "throws out his cards," and the clergyman takes a ten-dollar bill out of him "on a pair." She "orders him up" to build fires. Like a "knave" he joins the "clubs," where he often gets "high," which is "low," too. If he keeps "straight" he is oftentimes "flush." He grows old and "bluff," sees a "deal" of trouble, when at last he "shuffles" off his mortal coil, and "passes in his checks," as he is "raked in" by a "spade," life's fitful "game" is ended, and he waits the summons of Gabriel's "trump," which shall "order him up."

GOOD TASTE.

"I can't bear children," said Miss Prim, disdainfully.

Mrs. Partington looked at her over her spectacles, mildly, before she replied :

"Perhaps if you could you would like them better."
