Dave Sullivan sent us these interesting badges. They're WW2 vintage Officers' cooks and stewards. Three are the usual white on navy-blue, & one is bullion on blue.

FAMOUS FIRST FACTS UNDER PRESIDENT ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S ADMINISTRATION:

Medal of Honor awarded to a Marine was presented to Sergeant John Mackie by Commander Henry Rolando under authorization of General Order No. 17 dated 10 July 1862. During the attack on Fort Darling at Drewrys Bluff, James River, Va., on 15 May 1862, Mackie rallied the Marine Guard on the U.S.S. "Galena" after the entire Third Division manning four 10-inch Dahlgren guns and 100-pound rifles was killed or wounded. He cleared the deck and resumed the action without awaiting orders.

Medal of Honor awarded to a member of the Naval Service was authorized by act of Congress on 21 December 1861 (12 Stat.L.330), which authorized 200 medals for gallantry in action and other seamanlike qualities during the Civil War. The first awards were made to 36 recipients by General Order No. 11 of 3 April 1863. The first heroic deed for which the Medal of Honor was awarded was performed by John Williams, captain of the maintop of the U.S.S. "Pawnee" during an attack on Matthias Point on 25 June 1861.

General to become a rear admiral was Samuel Powhatan Carter, who organized the Tenn. Brigade and became a brigadier general of volunteers on 1 May 1862. He was breveted a major general on 13 March 1865, for gallantry and meritorious service and was mustered out of volunteer service on 15 January 1866. On 23 June 1865, was a lieutenant commander in charge of the gunboat "Monocacy" on the Asiatic station. Was appointed rear admiral on 16 May 1882, and retired on 6 August 1882.

Naval officer to become an admiral was David Glasgow Farragut, who received his appointment on 25 July 1866. Previously by act of Congress, on 16 July 1862 (12 Stat.L. 583) Farragut had been given the rank of rear admiral, and on 13 December 1864, had received the title of vice admiral.

We thought you might like to see most of the authorized and unauthorized U.S. Navy diver's badges, white on navy-blue. We do not know the reason for these shapes! National Geographic Magazine (October 1943 & December 1944) shows them with bottom of diving helmet pointed instead of rounded. Other variations exist, if you have anything different from the above and please send us a photocopy of these. If you have illustrations of diver's badges of other nations, please send xerxes too!!!

FAMOUS FIRST FACTS

The first naval officer to become "Admiral of the Navy" was Admiral George Dewey, who served from 3 March 1899, until his death, 16 January 1917. The rank was conferred by act of Congress, passed 2 March 1899 (30 Stat. I.995).

QUARTERMASTER, AVIATION

Dave Sullivan wrote and sent for us to see, on the right, a very well preserved rating badge that is khaki background. He bought this one and another on blue and with red chevrons, ten years ago for $35.00 each! What a bargain!

This was worn between 1918-1921. It is probably one of the rarest of rating badges? Dave Sullivan served in the U.S.M.C.

STEPHEN DECATUR ROWE

Does anyone know exactly when the U.S. Navy first introduced the "Dixie-Cup" cap in the navy? It has endured and though they had a replacement of it during the Viet-Nam era a few years back, it was brought back, along with the "Cracker-Jack" jumper and trousers.

NAVAL MILITIA (1910-1922)

Dave Sullivan sent us these rare badges for Naval Militianen back before WWI to 1922. During the Great War, naval militianen made up to 75% of the Navy serving overseas, and they took 90% of all medals & decorations! After the war, these men formed the Naval Reserve.

It is required that a minimum of officers, 75% be qualified Navy Reservists, with 90% of enlisted personnel meet these qualifications as well. California, Illinois, and Maryland all have had a Navy Militia.

REVENUE CUTTER SERVICE

Dave Sullivan of Narrington, Pennsylvania sent in this 1910 R.C.S. rate of a Master-at-Arms & Ship's Corporal which was unusual as its white chevrons have an underlay of red, a blue eagle and shield on white background.

This is the predecessor of the U.S.C.G. and it re-adopted the shield for Master-at-Arms for a rate. Perhaps this is the rarest of rare?

If you have a rate that is highly unusual, we would like to show it in the Crow's Nest also! This is YOUR newsletter, WE can make a difference in OUR very unique newsletters. Its up to US all to keep the ball rolling!! Keep sending in photocopies and when used, you will be given credit.

ASSAULT BOAT COXSWAIN (Part II)

Dave sends us this unusual variety, The arrowheads are yellow on two of these badges, the black badge with white anchors and dark arrowhead. The white background has arrowhead, and crossed anchors in all yellow!! Does anyone out there have a badge, or rate that is different in color? Does anyone know why they made them like this?

CONSTRUCTION BATTALION (1942-1946)

Dave Sullivan sent in this CPO's rate which bore the letters C.B. in block lettering.

U.S. NAVY RATING BADGES, SPECIALTY MARKS

DISTINGUISHING MARKS: 1885-1982 by John A.

Stacey gives an excellent account of Seabee patches, but even this one doesn't see the light of day there, until now here!

1866 REVISITED

Above is a Master-at-Arms and below a Boatswain's Mate and Coxswain. We thank Les Tucker and John A. Stacey for these patterns.

These were worn according to watch, for Coxswain or Boatswain's Mate, & Master-at-Arms also wore it, but on both sleeves at a position corresponding to the gold star worn by an officer's sleeve.

BULLION EAGLE RATING BADGES & OTHERS (Part III)

U.S. NAVY RATING BADGES, SPECIALTY MARKS, DISTINGUISHING MARKS: 1885-1982 by John described these well as mentioned earlier in Part I and Part II of this article. We are also including non-bullion eagle rating badges as well, Part IV will show more of the same. If you'd like to see Part V, it is up to every man to do his duty, a photocopy of your rate is welcomed and we'll faithfully illustrate it and if wanted also, you can ask for and receive the 11" X 17" velumpaper drawing many times larger than size. There is a seemingly unlimited variety of these crows, and we'd be grateful to you if you'll help us expand what we already know. Credit given to you for your assistance when it appears in art form.

MASTER CHIEF PETTY OFFICER OF THE COAST GUARD

MASTER CHIEF PETTY OFFICER OF THE NAVY

Thanks again to Dave Sullivan of Warrington, Pennsylvania for sharing these special rate badges with us, both very exclusive and really one-of-a-kind as there is only one each, the top CPO of the U.S.N. and U.S.C.G. which were instituted in 1968. According to John A. Stacey, author of U.S. NAVY RATING BADGES, SPECIALTY MARKS, DISTINGUISHING MARKS, 1885 - 1982, says that the first such rate was worn by MCPO of the Navy Black who had a pair of crossed cannon bellow the eagle and later MCPO of the Navy Whittet wore a winged airplane propellor under his eagle, in 1972 by a one inch gold star, point downwards!! The U.S. Coast Guard reinstated their WWI Master-at-Arms shield in place of a star which is also gold, worn by their MCPO of the USCG.

No doubt that some of these rates are made especially for the demand of collectors? Dave has of course the real thing here. You will see a lot of great badges on other pages of the Crow's Nest newsletter. We need more material like he is sharing with us.

SUB NET TENDER BADGE

Dave Sullivan of Warrington, Pa. sent this in and mentioned it is a real one and they go for about $250 to $350 in price if you can get someone to sell their badge! A/E/A a Harbor Net Tender, made and sold in WW2 unofficially for those in a specialized group and appeared in both blue on white & white on blue.

EX-APPRENTICE

Dave Sullivan also sent an assortment of these badges shown here, except one in red on blue, U.S. Merchant Marine in WW2 perhaps? Issued first in 1886, used until 1948. John Stacey's U.S. NAVY RATING BADGES, SPECIALTY MARKS, DISTINGUISHING MARKS 1885 - 1982 describes them being on an individual sailors uniform at the neck opening of the jumper, Ex-Apprentice Mark is it's full title.

Worn mid-way between wrist and elbow on the uniforms of chief petty officers, & coats of all enlistedmen. This was given to all E.M. who has passed through the rating of apprentice. It's to bad they didn't retain, or re-issue this badge, it is very decorative and can add a plus to a uniform.

U.S.S. ALBACORE SS-569

James P. Filkosky of Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania sent us these interesting items, one is a patch that is 4-3/4" X 5-1/8" and was dark-blue on white. The other item is a matchbook cover. Jim said the submarine was in the mothball fleet (Philadelphia) and believed to have been used mainly as a test sub by the U.S. Navy.

We'd really like to show your favorite ship or sub patches here also. Send a photocopy and receive the original velupaper drawing upon request. Sarge
