FOREWORD TO THE FOURTH EDITION

Since the original seven-volume series went out of print I have received frequent requests from around the world for volumes to complete what has now become a desirable collectors' item and bibliophilic rarity. So I am delighted that Martin Windrow, long associated with the very best in military publishing, has decided to make available this series to a new generation of readers interested in the history and heraldry of the SS.

I have kept a record of new information as it has become available, and have noted errors which have come to light as a result of new research or the appearance of a hitherto unknown badge; and I am pleased that this new information has not in any way devalued this or the other volumes in the series. Factual errors are few, and are corrected on p.75 of this edition. As before, I would be delighted to hear from anyone who may have an item in their collection, a photograph, or a document which they think might contribute to the comprehensiveness of future editions of this series.

Notes on the illustrations:

During the preparation of this first volume in the 1960s, very few of the insignia illustrated were known to have survived; and it was decided to use line illustrations throughout. Rather than to attempt to show early examples of insignia which varied greatly in design, manufacture and quality I chose to base the drawings on the later patterns as standardized by the Reichszeugmeisterei. This has led to a number of anachronisms, such as the style of numerals on early collar patches and armbands. Some drawings were reconstructed from available reference material, while others were the result of pure conjecture. Thirty years on, actual examples of most of these insignia, as well as hitherto unknown pieces, have found their way into private collections; and in nearly all cases have confirmed the accuracy of the line drawings.

In one sense I am pleased that while assisting the collector to identify SS insignia, the drawings have not provided foolproof blueprints for the faker. When a steel helmet bearing rare SS decals appeared on the market some years ago a quick check revealed that the decals were identical in size to illustrations in Volume 3 of this series. These dimensions were speculative, however, since no original examples were then known to exist. Not long after the appearance of Volume 1 a number of SS trumpet banners based on the illustrations on p.67 began to be advertised for sale: they were identical—despite the fact that the drawings had been reconstructed from a blurred illustration which appeared in a 1936 issue of the FM-Zeitschrift. I have been reluctant to include illustrations of issue and makers' marks for the same reason, but where I have done so they have not been reproduced in their original size.

Not only have Malcolm McGregor's line drawings been used to make copies of SS badges; but he has been paid the ultimate compliment of having his drawings frequently reproduced in other books on the subject, usually without permission or acknowledgement.

As in previous editions, I would like to record my gratitude for their considerable help during the preparation of this volume to the late Colonel C. M. Dodkins CBE, DSO, to Hugh Page Taylor, and to the Wiener Library, London. Hugh Page Taylor, David Littlejohn, Philip Buss and F. Ollenschläger also brought to my attention a number of omissions and mistakes in earlier editions which have now been corrected.

HISTORY OF THE GENERAL SS

In the early days of Nazism, Hitler was surrounded by the unwieldy SA. He realised the necessity of organising a more dedicated elite personal guard. This guard should not be large, but it had to consist of men of proven calibre, of Nordic blood, and of good character.

They had to act as bodyguard and spearhead. They had to protect both himself and important members of his party while they travelled around Germany furthering the cause of Nazism.

In March 1923 the embryo SS consisted of just two men, Joseph Berchtold and Julius Schreck who called themselves the STABSWACHE (Staff Guard)<sup>1</sup>. Two months later a new unit the STOSSTRUPP ADOLF HITLER (Adolf Hitler Shock Troop) was formed and commanded by Joseph Berchtold<sup>2</sup>.

After the abortive putsch of the 9th November 1923, in which a number of Nazis were killed, Hitler was imprisoned and the NSDAP banned.

Hitler, looking back on the period immediately after his release from Landsberg in December 1924, described the early days of the SS.<sup>3</sup>

"Being convinced that there are always circumstances in which elite troops are called for, I created in 1922-23 the 'Adolf Hitler Shock Troops'. They were made up of men who were ready for revolution and knew that some day things would come to hard knocks. When I came out of Landsberg everything was broken up and scattered in sometimes rival bands. I told myself then that I needed a bodyguard, even a restricted one, but made up of men who would be enlisted without conditions, even to march against their own brothers, only twenty men to a city (on condition that one could count on them absolutely) rather than a dubious mass. It was Maurice, Schreck, and Heiden who formed in Munich the first group of toughs, and were thus the origin of the SS; but it was with Himmler that the SS became an extraordinary body of men, devoted to an ideal, loyal to death".

In April 1925, Hitler ordered his chauffeur and personal bodyguard Julius Schreck, to raise a new shock troop. A few weeks later it was named the SCHUTZSTAFFEL or Protection Squad or SS.<sup>4</sup> The new SS was to be organised on a national basis. Each major city was called upon to provide one leader and ten of its best men.<sup>5</sup>

When Heinrich Himmler was made Reichsführer-SS with the rank of SS-Oberführer in January 1929, the SS was under the overall command of the SA, and numbered less than 280 men.<sup>6</sup> By 1930 the SS numbered 2727 men.<sup>7</sup> In June 1932, when Bruening's decree banned the SA, the SS had grown to 30,000 or approximately 10% of the SA.<sup>8</sup> On the 30th January Hitler became Chancellor and the SS had secretly recruited 52,000 more members.<sup>9</sup>

The assassination on June 30th 1934 of the Chief-of-Staff of the SA, Ernst Röhm, and the decree of the 26th July that recognised the part the SS had played in the purging of the SA, and promoted it to the status of an independent organisation within the NSDAP, was the turning point in the struggle for supremacy over the SA.<sup>10</sup>

Himmler set about implementing his theories of a racially and ideologically elite force, and the SS entered its second phase of rapid expansion. By the outbreak of the second World War the ALLGEMEINE-SS (General SS) numbered some 240,000 part-time members who were kept in readiness in case of internal strife by a small regular staff.<sup>11</sup> Members of the General SS were called up for service in the Armed Forces or Armed SS to such an extent that many General SS units survived in name only. Towards the end of the war the General SS barely exceeded 40,000 men.<sup>12</sup>, most of whom were staff and officials of the Reichsführung-SS and the Main offices.

DER WERDEGANG ZUM SS-MANN

How one became an SS man

After establishing his SS suitability and fitness, a Hitler Youth became an SS-Bewerber (Applicant) at the age of 18. On the Reich's Party Day of the same year he was accepted as an SS-Anwärter (Candidate) and given an SS identity card. After a short probationary period he took the oath of allegiance to Adolf Hitler.

As an SS Candidate, and during his first year's service, he was expected to win both the SA-Wehrabzeichen (SA Military Badge) and the Deutsche Reichsportabzeichen (Sports Badge in Bronze). At the age of 19 or 19½ depending on when his age group was called, he went into the Labour Service and then into the Armed Forces.

If after two years he decided not to remain in the Armed Forces as a non-commissioned officer candidate or as a regular, he returned to the SS, still as a candidate. Before final acceptance in the SS he was given special philosophical training, being thoroughly instructed in the principles of the SS, especially the marriage order and code of honour of the SS. On the 9th November, after his return from the Armed Forces, and subject to fulfilling all the special requirements, the SS candidate was finally accepted as an SS man. On the 9th November he was given the right to wear the SS dagger, and vowed at this ceremony, that he and his relations would for ever observe the basic laws of the SS. From that day on it was his right and duty, as was law in the SS, to defend his honour, according to the code of honour of the Black Corps. As an SS man he remained in the active General SS until he was 35 years of age, when upon application he was placed on the SS Reserve. When he was 45 years of age he passed into the Stammabteilung.1.

They are wearing black caps with cocade and skull, brown shirt with metallic buttons and NSDAP brassard edged with black, black tie on which is pinned a very small NSDAP members badge, brown or light khaki breeches, and Leather belts of civilian pattern. Leather lace-up boots and gaiters, or field grey puttees complete the uniform.

1929. The uniform had reached a high level of standardisation at the 4th Reich Party Day held at Weimar in August 1929. The black cap now has the national emblem above the skull. Reichsführer-SS Heinrich Himmler (far right) has silver piping on his cap. Truppführer Grimminger carrying the 'Blood Flag' wears the SA Cornet's gorget. The figure on the right wears adjutant's collar patches. The SS man (4th from left) wears an early type of Nazi belt buckle. At this time the SS normally wore the same pattern buckle as the SA.

His shirt collar and patches are edged in silver cord, and he wears adjutant's emblems on his collar patches. The collar patches worn by Maurer and Schaub have no apparent function, other than a purely decorative one. The figure speaking to Hitler (possibly Christian Weber) wears the early leader's brassard with gilt or silver twisted cord stripes to denote rank.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SS UNIFORM

- 1921-1922 Red NSDAP brassard with white circle and black swastika was worn on civilian dress and the old army uniforms of ex-soldiers and members of numerous pro-Nazi Free Corps.
- 1922-1923 NSDAP banned.
- February 1923 With the re-organisation of the NSDAP, an attempt was made to standardise the clothing of the SA. Its members were ordered to wear field grey breeches, grey wind-jackets, and the forerunner of the SA cap, a grey ski cap with the black, white and red national cockade in front.
- May 1923 The Adolf Hitler Shock Troop was formed, and wore army uniforms, NSDAP brassard, and grey ski cap with national cockade above a white metal skull badge.
- November 1925 Brown adopted as the colour of the SA uniform. The newly formed SS wore black caps, ties and edging to the brassard.
- September 1925 SS Musterbefehl der SS Oberleitung dated 29.9.25, ordered that in future the skull will be worn above the cockade on the cap.
- August 1929 Coloured cap bands and collar patches with unit numbering introduced for the SA. By this date the SS uniform had become reasonably standardised.
- June-Sept 1930 Brown shirt banned in certain states.
- 1931 SS awarded their motto MEINE EHRE HEISST TREUE. (My honour is loyalty).
- April to June 1932 NSDAP uniform banned throughout Germany.
- May 1932 Introduction of new badges of rank.
- July 1934 First SS dress regulations published.

THE TRADITIONAL UNIFORM

The name given to the SS brown shirt uniform after the introduction in 1932 of the new black service uniform. By 1932 the Traditional Uniform had become reasonably standardised although there were still variations in the colour of both shirts and breeches. During 1933 senior regular SS leaders were equipping themselves with the new black uniform while the part-time rank and file continued to wear the brown shirt. During the summer of 1935 the brown shirt was worn as a summer uniform for the last time, and by 1936 the black uniform had been issued to the whole SS. During the transitional period it was not uncommon to see items of the old and new uniforms being worn together.

ABZEICHEN

Insignia

All insignia worn on the shirt was subsequently worn on the black service uniform, and is described in the section dealing with insignia. There were however two pieces of insignia, that appear to have been worn on the shirt, and not on the black uniform. The first was a white linen brassard with HILFSPOLIZEI printed on it in black letters. This was worn by SA and SS men, instead of their NSDAP brassard, when serving as auxiliary police in 1933 1 The second was a circular white badge 8.5mm in diameter on which was a red cross. This badge was worn by medical orderlies who had not passed the State Medical examination. It was worn on the upper left arm above the brassard. 2. The rest of the uniform consisted of black breeches and boots, black leather waist belt and cross strap with nickel plated buckles and fittings. The equipment was the Imperial German army pattern, and consisted of pack, ground sheet, water bottle, drinking cup, mess tin, and bread bag.

THE BLACK SS SERVICE UNIFORM

Introduced in 1932 with the first SA and SS dress regulations.1. For a short time the black uniform was worn concurrently with the Traditional uniform. The cut of the black uniform was the same for all ranks, but the quality of the cloth of leaders uniforms was superior. Leaders often had their uniforms privately made, which accounts for detailed variations in quality and cut. After the setting up of the Reichszeugmeisterei (Quarter Master General) a remarkable degree of standardisation was achieved. However impressive the black uniform looked, it was not suited to the increasingly varied roles that the SS was called upon to play. As early as 1935 certain SS units were issued with grey uniforms identical in cut to the black ones.2. After the outbreak of war black uniforms were seldom worn.

SS Field caps

The SS had a number of unofficial field caps which were worn until a standard pattern was introduced in the summer of 1934.3. Two unofficial patterns were in use during the 1934 Reich Party Day.4. The first was a round black peakless cap, similar in cut to the Imperial army field cap. It had white piping around the crown and top of the band. 1st pattern metal cap badges were worn in front. The second was a black side cap, with a white metal skull on the left side. The 1934 pattern was an earth grey side cap with white metal button in front, and a white silk embroidered eagle on earth grey triangular cloth base, which was worn on the left side of the cap. The cap was the same for all ranks. 5 Later the cap was produced in black cloth with the same badges, the eagle being embroidered on a black cloth base.

THE FIELD-GREY FIELD SERVICE UNIFORM

Certain units had been issued with a field-grey* uniform for field work as early as 1935.1, but it was officially introduced in November 1935.1a This uniform was identical in cut to the black one, but was worn without the NSDAP brassard. In 1936 the SS version of the national emblem was introduced, and was worn on the upper left sleeve of the tunic and overcoat.2. In 1938 two shoulder cords began to be worn, instead of one. Prior to the introduction of field-grey peaked caps, in March 1937.3. black ones were worn with field-grey uniform.

THE FIELD-GREY SERVICE UNIFORM

Introduced in 1938 to replace the black uniform as a service dress for members of the General SS. It was identical in cut to the black uniform, but was worn with the national emblem instead of the NSDAP brassard, and with two shoulder cords, instead of one.

* Some confusion exists as to the exact colour of the first grey SS uniforms. The Germans referred to the colour as erdgrau or earth-grey, but as far as can be ascertained it differed little from the later SS Feldgrau or field-grey, which was identical to the colour of army uniforms.

SS-DIENSTGRADABZEICHEN

SS Badges of rank

Although various patterns of rank badge had been in use since 1929, it was not until 1933 that the system of ranks and rank badges was formalised.

On the 19th May 1933 the nine ranks, Mann, Scharführer, Truppführer, Sturmführer, Sturmbannführer, Standartenführer, Oberführer, Gruppenführer and Obergruppenführer were increased to seventeen by addition of the ranks Oberscharführer, Obertruppführer, Obersturmführer, Sturmhauptführer and Obersturmbannführer, and the new ranks, Sturmman, Rottenführer and Brigadeführer.1.

In August 1934 new badges of rank were introduced for Stabschef der SA, and Reichsführer-SS.2.

In October 1934 new ranks of Unterscharführer and Untersturmführer were introduced, and Trupp-Obertrupp- and Haupttruppführer were replaced by Haupt- and Stabsscharführer.3.

Badges of rank remained unaltered until 1942, when a new pattern of oakleaf emblem was introduced for Ober-Brigade-Gruppen- and Obergruppenführer, and the new rank of Oberstgruppenführer.4.

SS-KRAGENSPIEGEL

SS Collar patches

Collar patches were used to denote the rank and unit of the wearer. The unit designation was worn on the right, and the badge of rank on the left collar patch. Leaders with the rank of SS-Standartenführer and above wore their badge of rank on both collar patches, as did SS administrative officials.5. Collar patches were made of cloth for all ranks up to and incl. SS-Obersturmbannführer. SS-Standartenführer and above had velvet collar patches. Braid and stars were matt aluminium for all ranks. Members of SS-Stammabteilungen had bronzed stars and black braid with silver stripe.6. The twisted cord edging differed according to rank.

SS-Mann up to and incl. SS-Obertruppführer, 1.5 mm white twisted cord.

SS-Sturmführer up to and incl. SS-Sturmhauptführer, 1.5 mm black and aluminium twisted cord.

SS-Sturmbannführer up to and incl. Obergruppenführer, 1.5 mm aluminium twisted cord.7.

In October 1934 a simpler system was adopted.8.

SS-Anwärter up to and incl. SS-Stabsscharführer, 1.5 mm black and aluminium twisted cord.

SS-Untersturmführer up to and incl. Reichsführer-SS, 1.5 mm aluminium twisted cord.

The probationary rank of SS-Bewerber did not wear collar patches.9.

All collar patch emblems were embroidered in white silk for all ranks up to and incl. SS-Stabsscharführer, and aluminium wire for all commissioned ranks.10.

SS Shoulder cords

Shoulder cords introduced in May 1933, were worn on the right shoulder only and denoted the rank group of the wearer. In 1938 shoulder cords began to be worn on both shoulders on the field grey service uniform of the General SS. Shoulder cords for SS men up to and incl. the rank of SS-Obertuppführer were at first made of black and white twisted cord.3. In October 1934 they were changed to black and aluminium twisted cord.4. In August 1934 the special white metal emblem worn on the shoulder cords by the Reichsführer-SS was introduced.5.

OBERSTE S.A.-FÜHRUNG

SA High Command

Before the assassination of Ernst Röhm in June 1934, and the establishment of the SS as an independent organisation within the NSDAP, the SS came under the overall command of the SA. SS Leaders attached to the Oberste S.A.-Führung wore carmine collar patches, shoulder cord underlay, and 3 cm. wide black armband.1.

SS High Command

Himmler's personal staff and officials of the three main, and numerous subsidiary departments of the Reichsführung-SS were members of the General SS. Apart from the armbands and armbadges that identified the wearer's main department, there were also those that showed the departmental rank of the wearer. These armbands were supposed to have been worn on the left cuff of the black uniform only.2., although they were later worn on the grey service uniform. The departmental rank armband had precedence over any other armband, and was not supposed to have been worn in conjunction with a second armband, although this was often done.

As the SS increased its sphere of activity the Reichsführung-SS was enlarged to eight main departments, and a new armband was introduced in 1939, which was to be worn by all officials of the RFSS regardless of department.3.

Members of the medical company of the SS Main Office wore SAN.-ABT.SS HA on their armband.4.

In 1936 an armband V.u.W Hauptamt was introduced for members of the Main Economic and Administrative Office.5.

SS-OBERABSCHNITTE

SS Districts

Germany was divided into SS Districts which corresponded topographically with the military district or Wehrkreis, and were known by the name of the region in which they were situated. An SS District was commanded by a senior SS leader with a regular staff.

The Staff of an SS District wore the name of the district on the armband.

Certain members of SS-OA.OST wore OST on their right collar patch.

In late 1932 the SS had 5 SS-Gruppen (Later Oberabschnitte).

Süd	Ost
West	Südost
Nord

In 1937 there were 13 SS-OBERABSCHNITTE.1.

Süd	Ost
Südwest	Südost
Rhein	Elbe
West	Main
Nordwest	Fulda-Werra
Nord	Mitte
Nordost

By October 1944 there were 23 existing on paper.

In addition to those existing in 1937, there were: *

Donau (formerly Österreich)	Warthe
Alpenland	Böhmen-Mähren
Weichsel	Ostland
Ukraine

*On the 1.11.39, Ost was renamed Spree.

On the 20.4.40, Nord was renamed Ostsee.

On the 24.5.40, Rhein became Rhein-Westmark.

On the 25.5.40, Nordwest became Nordsee.

SS Sub-districts

Each SS District was divided into three or four Sub-districts which were identified by roman numerals. An SS Sub-district was commanded by a senior SS leader with a regular staff.

The staff of an SS Sub-district wore the number of their sub-district in Roman numerals on the right collar patch and armband.

In 1937 there were XXXIV SS Sub-districts.1.

In October 1944 there were XXXXV SS Sub-districts.2.

SS-STANDARTEN

SS Regiments

Each SS Sub-district had under its command three or four SS foot regiments which were identified by arabic numerals on the right collar patch. SS reserve regiments had the letter R behind both collar patches.

A regiment consisted of four active and one or more reserve battalions identified by the colour of the stripes on the armband. This complicated system was changed and enlarged in June 1934.1., and again in December of the same year.2. A battalion consisted of up to four STÜRME (companies) identified by the arabic numerals on the armband. Each company was divided into three or four TRUPPS (platoons). Each platoon was divided into three SCHAREN (squads). The Smallest SS formation was a ROTTE (file).3.

Leaders with the rank of SS-Ustuf. up to and incl. SS-Staf. wore armbands with aluminium stripes and the regimental number in arabic numerals, or the regimental name. Those on the regimental or battalion staff, had plain armbands with aluminium stripes.

SS men had armbands with coloured stripes, names and numerals in white silk. The commemorative names that appear on SS armbands were those of Nazis killed on the 9th November 1923, and during the bitter struggles with the communists during the thirties. Others have a purely geographical association.

SS-MOTOREINHEITEN (Später KRAFTFAHRSTÜRME)

SS Motorised Units

Each SS Sub-district had a motorised unit under its command, which was identified by a letter M and Arabic numerals on the right collar patch and a spoked wheel on the armband.

Members of the Motorstaffel z.b.V. der Gruppe (later Abschnitt) Ost wore Ost on their right collar patch and on the armband.

In 1937 there were 14 motorised units.<sup>1</sup> and in October 1944 there were 19.<sup>2</sup>

SS-FLIEGERSTURM

SS Flying Company

The SS Flying Company was formed in Munich in November 1931. In September 1933 all flying units were incorporated in the Deutsche Luftsport Verband.<sup>1</sup> There appears to have been no official insignia to identify SS flying personnel, but some did wear a white metal winged propeller on the right collar patch.<sup>2</sup> Certain members of the company wore an SA/SS pilot's wings on their right breast.<sup>3</sup>

SS-STREIFENDIENST

SS Provost Service

A Streifendienst was formed as and when required by the commander of an SS District. Amongst its duties were the patrolling of out-of-bounds areas.

seeing that SS men behaved themselves, were properly dressed, and were not seen in the streets, in uniform after midnight. A patrol consisted of two or three men under the command of a senior non-commissioned leader, who carried a special pass.<sup>1</sup> All members of a Streife wore a nickel-plated gorget.

1. Organisationsbuch der NSDAP, 1936. p 55.

SS-STAMMABTEILUNGEN

SS Supplementary Reserve Companies

These special units were formed by each SS district from members of the General SS who were over 45 years of age.

Members of a Stammabteilung wore SS uniform with silver grey collar patches. The right collar patch bore the emblem and number in black silk of the active unit to which they were attached.

In July 1936 plain silver grey armbands with aluminium stripes for leaders, and grey for men were introduced, as were grey velvet collar patches for SS-Standartenführer, with aluminium embroidered oakleaf.<sup>2</sup>

By 1939 members of an SS-Stammabteilung attached to an SS District wore the name of the district in black silk for men, and aluminium wire embroidery for leaders, on their armbands.<sup>3</sup> Also in use were bronzed rank pips, and black collar patch rank braid with aluminium stripe, instead of the normal pattern.<sup>4</sup>

SS-VERWALTUNGSFÜHRER

SS Administrative Leaders

Whilst the SS was still part of the SA, SS administrative officials wore the same insignia as their counterparts in the SA, namely blue collar patches and underlay to the shoulder cord, and their badges of rank on both collar patches.<sup>1</sup>

From July 1934 until the introduction in 1935 of a special armband (Plate No. 15) SS administrative officials wore no distinctive badges.<sup>2</sup>

1. Uniformen der Braunhemden. p 93.

2. Mitteilungsblatt der RZM. No. 3., 1.2.36., p 27.

SS-EHRENFÜHRER SS Honorary Leaders

Honorary rank in the SS was conferred on a number of important aristocrats, financiers and industrialists, whom Reichsführer-SS Heinrich Himmler knew would be valuable to him, in his attempts to infiltrate influential conservative groups in the German hierarchy.<sup>1</sup>

Honorary leaders were given the right to wear SS uniform with SS rank which corresponded to their status in civilian life.

Special insignia which at first was quite straightforward was later enlarged.<sup>2</sup>, and then, not long after, seems to have been abolished altogether. Apart from special collar patches and armbands, honorary leaders also wore a silver aiguillette, similar to the pattern introduced in 1938 for all SS leaders.

SS-DIENSTDOLCH MODELL 1933

SS Service Dagger, Model 1933

Introduced on the 15th December 1933 for all ranks in the General SS. The right to wear the dagger was bestowed on an SS man on the 9th November, after he had served three years as an SS candidate, and had been finally accepted in the SS. The dagger was worn with all orders of dress until September 1940, when it was no longer to be worn.

Dagger Black wooden grip with inset white metal eagle and enamel SS badge. Nickel-plated sheath and hilt pieces. Black metal sheath. Etched motto on blade. MEINE EHRE HEISST TREUE. Daggers presented by the Reichsführer-SS Heinrich Himmler bore an inscription on the reverse of the blade. IN HERZLICHER KAMERADSCHAFT H. HIMMLER. Average overall length 37 cms.

Hanger FESTSTELLRIEMEN was a short black leather strap with an oval nickel-plated buckle at one end, and a nickel-plated clip at the other. The strap was passed through the ring on the dagger sheath, buckled, and then clipped onto a D ring on a black leather slide on the service belt. In November 1934 it was ordered that with service uniform, the dagger would, in future, be worn in a special vertical black leather hanger, DOLCHTRAGETASCHE.<sup>1</sup> The dagger was, from that date, to be worn with the old type hanger, only with walking out uniform.

SS Service dagger Model 1936

Introduced on the 25th August 1936 as a new dagger for wear with service and undress uniforms, by commissioned and those non-commissioned ranks who were fully fledged SS men before the 30th January, 1933. Dagger identical to the 1933 model with the exception of an extra sheath fitting and chain hanger.

SS-SPIELMANNSZUG UND MUSIKZUG

SS Corps of drums and bands

Musicians in the SS, as in the German army were divided into two distinct groups. The SPIELMANNSZUG or corps of drums, consisted of between eight and twenty four drummers and fifers or buglers, commanded by a Drum-major.

The MUSIKZUG or band consisted of between twenty and forty musicians led by a MUSIKFÜHRER (Bandmaster).

Each SS foot regiment had one band and one or more corps of drums.

SS cavalry regiments had a corps of trumpeters which consisted of up to twenty trumpeters and a KESSELPAUKER (Kettledrummer).

SS-SCHWALBENNESTER

SS "Swallow's nests"

Musicians wore special wings or "swallow's nests", as they were known in Germany, on both shoulders of their tunic. SS "swallow's nests" were made of black cloth trimmed with white, for the corps of drums, and aluminium braid for bandsmen. Drum-majors had 7 cm long white fringe.<sup>1</sup>

In 1936 white trimming for "swallow's nests" was abolished and all musicians had aluminium braid, but bandsmen were given 3 cm, and Drum-majors 7 cm long aluminium fringe.<sup>2</sup>

Drum-major's mace

Bandmasters with leaders rank did not wear "swallow's nests", but had a lyre on their armbandage.

SS-SHELLENBÄUME SS "Jingling Johnnies"

"Jingling Johnnies" were carried at the head of bands and came to Prussia in the 18th century, from Turkey, via Poland and Austria. Its origin in Moham-medan armies was that of a symbol of command. Later it was used in Turkish Janissary bands as a percussion instrument.<sup>3</sup>

"Jingling Johnnies" did not conform to any standard pattern, and many different models existed. In most cases they were paid for by private sub-scription and presented to a unit by the citizens of its garrison town.<sup>4</sup> Some "Jingling Johnnies" of disbanded Imperial army regiments found their way into the SS but were handed back to those regiments of the new Wehrmacht, who were to carry on the traditions of the disbanded regiments.<sup>5</sup>

SS-FANFARENTÜCHER UND PAUKENGEHÄNGE SS Trumpet and kettledrum banners

Trumpet and kettledrum banners did not conform to any standard design, and were in most cases presented to the unit by public subscription. The quality and elaborateness of the design of the banner depended on the generosity of the subscribers.

DIE BLUTFAHNE

The "Bloodflag"

On the 9th November 1923 Hitler's putsch to gain control of Munich was shattered by a police volley. From amongst the sixteen National Socialists that had been killed, and the others that had been wounded, a blood soaked swastika flag was taken from its dead bearer, Andreas Bauriedl. The NDSAP was banned, Hitler imprisoned, and the flag was confiscated by the Munich Police President.

On the 9th November 1926 the same flag with a new pole and top was presented to the SS-Sturm 1 (Traditionssturm) 1 SS.-Standarte (München), for safe-keeping. It had by then become one of the most honoured relics of Hitler's struggle for power. From that day on all new standards and flags were inaugurated by being touched with the "Blood Flag".1.

STANDARTE (FELDZEICHEN) DER SS

SS Standard

The first presentation of four SA standards took place on the 28th January 1923, on the first Party Day Rally held in Munich. It then became the custom to present new standards and flags at the annual Party Day Rally.<sup>2</sup>

The first 8 SS standards were presented at Nuremberg, in September 1933.<sup>3</sup>

The cloth part of the standard measured 60 x 70 cms, and was edged on three sides with black and white fringe; later Black, white and red fringe. The flag was suspended from a white metal cross bar 12 x 40 cms, on the front of which were the letters NSDAP on a black ground. On the reverse was the name of the region or district to which the unit belonged, or a commemorative name. In September 1933 the letters and the name were reversed. Above the cross bar was the national emblem which consisted of a white metal oakleaf wreath with gilt binding, inside which was a black swastika 32 cms in diameter, with white metal surround. The wreath and swastika were surmounted by a gilt metal flying eagle. The overall height of the standard was 2.30 m.

The standard was trooped by the 1st battalion of an SS regiment, and carried by a cornet who was either a senior non-commissioned or junior commissioned leader.

A cornet wore a gorget, bandolier and white gloves when carrying the standard.<sup>4</sup>

SS-STURMBANNFAHNE

SS Battalion flag

The first 10 SS battalion flags were presented in 1929.

42 more were presented at Munich in November of the same year.6.

The flag measured 120 x 140 cms, and was edged on three sides with black and aluminium fringe. In the top left hand corner was a black rectangular patch 20 x 15 cms, which was edged in twisted aluminium cord, and on which was embroidered in aluminium wire the number of the battalion in roman numerals, and the regimental number in arabic numerals. The swastika rested on its side in the first pattern of the flag, but in the later pattern it stood on its point. The flag was attached to the pole by six 10 mm nickel-plated rings. The pole was made of wood polished black, and was surmounted by an aluminium lance head. If at any time a standard-bearer had been killed carrying the flag, his name and date of his death were engraved on a metal ring which was then fitted to the pole above the joint. The overall height of the flag was 3 m.

The flag was carried by a senior non-commissioned leader who wore a gorget, bandolier and white gloves. 7.

ADDENDA

- Page 2 In the caption to the illustration reproduced on p.4 the names "Maurer (Maurice?)" should be replaced by that of Rudolf Hess. I am grateful to Dr. Raiber of Hockessin, Delaware, for pointing out to me that the figure deleted from the photograph, third from left, is in fact Hess. In the caption to the illustration reproduced on p.6 Maurer's name should be replaced by that of Rudolf Hess, and the figure speaking to Hitler is definitely Christian Weber.
- Page 11 Appearing in this illustration, from left to right, are Fritz Weitzel, Heinz Prutzmann, Werner Lorenz, Himmler and Schmitt.
- Page 12 The SS Cloak was for wear off duty only.
The SS Mess Dress was also often worn with white shirt. The missing footnote is: SS-Befehlsblatt, No 7, 15 June 1934, p.2.
The SS Evening Dress trousers had white and not aluminium braid with black stripes.
- Page 13 The illustration on the left, of formal evening dress for SS leaders, is from the 1940 edition of the SS-Kleiderkasse catalogue, and is incorrect insofar as it omits the twisted aluminium cord around the top of the cuffs and the top and bottom edges of the SS brassard.
The illustration on the right was drawn by Malcolm McGregor in the same style as utilized in the SS-Kleiderkasse catalogue.
- Page 14 The right to wear the SS brassard could be withdrawn for disciplinary reasons. See Heinz Hohne's ORDER OF THE DEATH'S HEAD, p.27.
- Page 15 SS Service peaked caps with aluminium cords could also be worn by Oberjunker of the Sanitäts-Abteilungen. See RFSS Microfilm T-158, Frame 2688675.
- Page 20 Following Ernst Röhm's demise and prior to Himmler's appointment as Reichsführer-SS, Himmler and his personal staff wore white collar patches.
- Page 26 Plate 3, Fig.5. The metal oakleaf badge on the Reichsführer-SS shoulder cord is too big.
- Page 38 Plate 8. Armbands with coloured stripes were abolished in June 1937.
- Page 46 SS Pioneer units originally came under command of an SS-Abschnitt and wore the Abschnitt number on the right collar patch, but it was later changed to the battalion number.
- Page 50 The aiguillette for SS Honorary Leaders did not resemble the 1938 pattern for SS leaders, but was of special design.

- Page 67 The trumpet banner illustrated is thought not to have been Allgemeine-SS, but SS-Verfügungstruppe—possibly SS-Standarte "Germania".
- Page 71 The drawing of the finial on the SS battalion colour is not a good representation.
